MARCH. III Month.

Nor Pageants of Ambition, nor the Mines
Of graſping Av'rice, nor the poiſon'd Sweets
Of pamper'd Luxury, he plants his Foot
With Firmneſs on his old paternal Fields,
And ſtands unſhaken. There ſweet Proſpects riſe
Of Meadows ſmiling in their flow'ry Pride,
Green Hills and Dales, and Cottages embower'd,
The Scenes of Innocence, and calm Delight.

One fails to take Advantage of. At laſt I got to the Foot of a very high Mountain, named Chimboraço, which is continually covered with Snow, and all the Ground was frozen and icy. The Cordilleras being nothing but a long Range of Mountains whoſe Summits vaniſh from the Sight amidſt the Clouds, there is no Poſſibility of croſſing them but by narrow Paſſages. That Paſs by which I penetrated, gave ſufficient Marks of its great Elevation above the Level of the Sea: I was but at the Foot of Chimboraço, and yet found myſelf already in a Region where it never rains, I ſaw nothing round me to a very great Diſtance, but Snow and hoar Froſts.

I had been following exactly the Tract of an old Troop of Spaniards, the Memory of which hath been tranſmitted to us by Hiſtorians. This Troop was commanded by Don Pedro Alvarado, when in the firſt Years of the Conqueſt of Peru, and preciſely 200 Years before me, he made this ſame Paſſage, in order to convey a conſiderable Reinforcement to Francis Pizarre. He went from Puerto Viejo to Guayaquil, paſſing through Jipijapa, as I have done; from Guayaquil he went up to the Foot of Chimboraço, and paſſed by the South Side of that Mountain, in order to go to Riobamba, the Name of which was then Riocpampa; but in paſſing over a Hill, which muſt neceſſarily be the ſame as is now called the Arenal, ſeventy of his People, who knew nothing of Pe-
